Dear Russ:

General Gale, Deputy SACEUR, has now made his report to General Norsted concerning the Alert Measures problem in Germany APP I thought you might find useful a summary of his activities and recommendations.

He reviewed his meeting of March 23 with the three Ambassadors and Strauss, Ambassador Bruce's talk with Chancellor Adenauer (Bonn's 2130 to the Department), the French Ambassador's talk with Globke (Bonn's G-574 to the Department), and SHAPE Colonel D'Angelo's discussion on May 12 with German Defense officials (Bonn's G-614 to the Department).

He then described his meeting of June 1 with the three Ambassadors and Defense Minister Strauss. General Gale thinks of this as the SHAPE-sponsored conference. Out of it he considers four clear facts emerged:

1. The German authorities had no clearcut detailed list of measures which might have to be undertaken in the case of National Emergency by the various departments of Government and the Länder authorities.
2. In the detailed analysis of what should be done, the Federal authorities had come across differences of interpretation of action to implement the Alert Measures as between the two Army groups in Germany.

3. There was

Russell Fessenden, Esquire,
Deputy Director, Office of European Regional Affairs,
Department of State,
Washington.

3. There was no chance of the Federal Government attempting to enact the necessary legislation.

4. The German authorities would be prepared to react to a proclamation issued by the three Ambassadors. The terms and wording of such proclamation to be drawn up in consultation with the Federal authorities and to be of the most general nature.

As a result of the meeting, he proposes to set up under SHAPE auspices a working party to define precisely what action should be undertaken to implement the Alert Measures in a practical way. CINCENT would be represented so that any matters of apparent or real difference between the two Army groups would be cleared up easily. The real object of the working party would be to give the German authorities the essential information they would require in order to draw up their complete list of measures. At the same time the three Ambassadors, the German authorities, and SHAPE would draw up the necessary proclamation.

MOD Strauss, according to General Gale, does not consider it an insuperable task to draw up the list of actions which could be immediately implemented in the event that a national emergency existed and the necessary legislation had been passed. However, an essential preliminary must be the cleaning up of details with the Allied military authorities. In an emergency there would be little or no difficulty in having the backing of all German authorities for the acceptance of the proclamation which would declare a state of emergency. If time permitted and in the pressure of such circumstances, it would be reasonably certain that there would be a favorable two-thirds majority in the Bundestag.

General Gale concludes that we cannot expect the Germans to amend the Basic Law at present and that the above-mentioned approach will be the most satisfactory way to get at the problem. Enclosed is a copy of the type of proclamation he has in mind suggesting to the Ambassadors and German authorities.

Sincerely,

Raymond L. Thurston
